- Step 1: Open the web browser of your choice and enter search.ebscohost.com into the address bar. The screen it should take you to should look like this:

- Step 2: Click on the first option in the list, “EBSCOhost Research Databases.” It will take you to the Database Selection screen.
 - On that page, you will see a list of databases with the name of the database next to a check box and a brief description of each database underneath them. Whether you opt to click on check boxes or the name links (the first red arrow or the second in the following image) depends on if you wish to search a single database or multiple databases.
 - To select multiple databases, click on the check-box for each database you wish to use, followed by the yellow “Continue” button at either the top or bottom of the list.
 - To search a single database, simply click on the link text with the title of that database.

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the URL `web.b.ebscohost.com/ehost/search/selectdb?vid=0&sid=419388e6-086f-47a8-bd03-cb9f50bd9fba%40`. The page title is "Choose Databases | Select another EBSCO service". Below the title, there is a yellow "Continue" button and a checkbox labeled "Select / deselect all". The first database listed is "America: History and Life with Full Text", which has a red arrow pointing to its checkbox. Below this title is a description: "America: History & Life with Full Text is the definitive database of literature covering the history and culture of the United States and Canada, from prehistory to the present. With selective selective indexing for 1,700 journals from 1955 to present, this database is without question the most important bibliographic reference tool for students and scholars of U.S. and Canadian history. America: History & Life with Full Text also provides full-text coverage of more than 200 journals and nearly 100 books." There are links for "Title List" and "More Information". The second database listed is "American Doctoral Dissertations", with a red arrow pointing to its title link. Below this title is a description: "American Doctoral Dissertations, is an open-access database built to assist researchers in locating both historic and contemporary dissertations and theses. Created with the generous support of the H. W. Wilson Foundation and the Congregational Library & Archives in Boston, it incorporates EBSCO's previously released American Doctoral Dissertations, 1933-1955, and features additional dissertation metadata contributed by select American colleges and universities. Providing researchers with citations to graduate research across a broad span of time, from the early 20th century to the present, this database will continue to grow through regular updates and new partnerships with graduate degree-granting institutions. The subset of this database, American Doctoral Dissertations, 1933-1955, provides electronic access to the only comprehensive record of dissertations completed during that time period, the print index Doctoral Dissertations Accepted by American Universities. Containing twenty-two years of dissertation research and amounting to nearly 100,000 citations, this index was compiled annually for the National Research Council and The American Council of Learned Societies by the Association of Research Libraries. It was published by the H. W. Wilson Company." There is a "More Information" link. The third database listed is "eBook Academic Collection (EBSCOhost)".

- Step 3: Whichever option you select, it will take you to the search screen, shown below.

- Step 4: In addition to the one primary and three optional search fields, there are options to limit your search results to full text articles (left arrow) or scholarly, peer-reviewed, journals (right arrow).
 - The full text option means you will only see results whose full article you can access in EBSCOhost. Peer-Reviewed means that a more stringent set of checks have been made in the process of publication and indicates the work has some scholarly merit.

- Step 5: Once you have entered your terms into the search bar and hit the search button, you will be shown a set of search results which should look something like the following.
 - Clicking the text which says PDF Full Text (red arrow) will open a copy of your article in pdf format within your browser window.

A red arrow points to the 'PDF Full Text (1.2MB)' link for the second article.

- Step 6: On the search results page you also will have the option to further limit your search results if you did not choose to do so beforehand.
 - In addition to the checkboxes for full text or peer reviewed options, there is a slider bar (red arrow) for limiting results to material published between a range of years.
 - Moving the left side of the slider alters the earliest date results can have while moving the right side of the slider alters the most recent date on which publication could have happened.

The search results are filtered by 'Publication Date' from 1973 to 2017, as indicated by a slider bar with a red arrow pointing to it. The left sidebar contains various filters: 'Limit To' (Full Text, Scholarly (Peer Reviewed) Journals, References Available), 'Source Types' (All Results, Academic Journals (86), Reviews (49)), 'Subject: Thesaurus Term', 'Subject', 'Publication', 'Publisher', and 'Company'. The main content area displays two search results. The first result is '2. Strategic citizens of America: transnational inequalities and transformation of citizenship.' by Baltu, Evren; Altan-Olcay, Ozlem, published in 'Ethnic & Racial Studies' in May 2016. The second result is '3. Degraded Work, Declining Community, Rising Inequality, and the Transformation of the Protestant Ethic in America: 1870-1930.' by Wisman, Jon D.; Davis, Matthew E., published in 'American Journal of Economics & Sociology' in Nov 2013. Both results include 'Cited References' counts and 'PDF Full Text' download links. The bottom of the page shows a 'Show all 5 images' link and a 'Cited References: (81)' link.

- Step 7: Assuming you did not need to further specify options to limit your number of results, click on the full text link for the article you wish to peruse.
 - Upon opening you will see a screen similar to the following one. Within this screen you can scroll through the text of your article or (red arrow) print a copy of it.

- ABSTRACT: This article analyses the process whereby 'natural' citizens of one country mobilize their resources so that their children receive by birthright, the citizenship of a rich liberal democracy. Utilizing the case of Turkish upper classes, who give birth in the USA in order to benefit from the jus soli principle, we trace the emergence of new inequalities at the intersection of multiple citizenship regimes. We show that, by mobilizing resources in markets of health care, travel, and real estate, those with means can acquire US citizenship for their children in expectation of future benefits. Because they are able to access 'valuable' citizenships, these actors can strategically combine privileges within nation states with inequalities between citizenship regimes at the global level for the children.
